Although the Concordia Stingers men's basketball team has failed in its attempt to capture an unprecedented fourth consecutive Q.U.A.A. title this season, one can hardly blame super soph Craig Norman. The second year guard/forward has had an outstanding season for the young Stingers, leading the team in 6 different offensive categories, as well as being named to 5 tournament All-Star teams.

The 6'3 Recreation major has averaged 23.2 points per game on 56% shooting from the field, and 74% from the foul line, despite facing a variety of special defenses aimed at shutting him off. In addition, he has pulled down over 5 rebounds a game and usually received the task of guarding the opposition's top offensive player.

"Craig has combined his intensity and exceptional talent to become one of the top players in the country," head coach Doug Daigneault recently stated. "When things got tough and we were hurt with injuries, Craig just played harder. He has been an inspiration to the whole team."

The former Dawson College standout was recently named to the 1983-84 Quebec University Athletic Association All-Star Team.
